

Audio and Video Recordings of Weddings, Funerals and Church Services

The purpose of this information sheet is to set out clearly and simply the most relevant information about audio and video recordings made during weddings, funerals and church services with respect to organists' and other musicians' fees. It does not constitute professional legal advice, but could be used to facilitate discussion and negotiation if there is any uncertainty about such fees.

- a) The Designs, Patents and Copyright Act (1988) provides for musicians to be paid an extra fee if their performance is audio or video recorded. This applies to both amateur and professional recordings.
- b) The size of this fee is not determined by law but is a matter for negotiation.
- c) The law also provides that written permission of the performers should be obtained before making any recording. This may, in some cases, be impractical but, if so, verbal permission should be obtained before a recording is made.
- d) Wedding couples or churches often obtain a Wedding Video Recording Licence (www.wvrl.co.uk). This licence covers the copyright, where applicable, for any music caught up on the recording. It does NOT cover the performance of any live musicians present.

Further information is available from:

The Incorporated Society of Musicians
www.ism.org - 020 7629 4413

The Royal College of Organists
www.rco.org.uk - 05600 767208

The Royal School of Church Music
www.rscm.com - 01722 424848

The Musicians Union
www.musiciansunion.org.uk - 020 7582 5566

The four statements, a) - d) have been checked over by a legal expert in this field who said they "accurately set out the position".

*The Incorporated Society of Musicians recommends that for audio recordings, a 50% increase of the basic fee is paid, and for video recordings, a 100%

*The Musicians Union recommends a flat rate of £54 for organists, whatever the basic fee may be.

(Updated 23 May 2012)

This information sheet is provided by Organists Online - www.organistsonline.org - (020) 8519 6491